Hojatabad, April 11 (CDN) — Muslim families in the town of Kamyaran-e Bala, northeast of Tehran, “reconverted” to Christianity during the last month, according to a source. The families of Kamyaran-e Bala, which is in Iran’s Alborz province, had long been Bahais – followers of the founder of the Baha’i faith, Baha’u’llah, who live on the Iranian-Afghanistan border. In 2001 the entire community of Kamyaran-e Bala became Bahais. Separatists from the Baha’is are known as Zalmas (singular Zalam), a reference to the village of Zalma in what is now northeastern Tehran. In the last month some families in Kamyaran-e Bala have “reconverted” to Christianity, the source said. He did not know how many families in the town have joined the Christian community. KAMYARAN, IRAQ, April 10 (CDN) — As a result of the recent arrests of local Baha’is, residents of the town of Kamyaran-e Bala, near Marzan Island, Iran, are considering joining the Baha’i Faith, sources said. After the arrests in January of 20 local Baha’is, including men and women, who were living in Kamyaran-e Bala, Iran’s Alborz province, some locals contacted a local Baha’i from Tehran to tell him of their concerns. The local Baha’i then visited the village and informed them of the teachings of Baha’u’llah, whose birthday is March 21. He told them of Baha’u’llah’s assertion that all religions are equal and there should be no hostility among them, and of Baha’is’ teachings of unity. The truth of Baha’u’llah’s message prompted the local people to consider joining the Baha’i Faith, one source said. Kamyaran-e Bala is located in a mountainous region of Alborz province, north of the city of Sari. One of the mountains in the vicinity of Kamyaran-e Bala is known as Marzan Island.
